MRS. M. BRANDAU DIES IN HOSPITAL FROM BURNS

Mrs. Martha Brandau Felton, 70 years old, only sister of Henry Brandau of Tinley Park, died late last Thursday in the St. James hospital in Chicago Heights from burns sustained the same morning while she was attending the furnace fire in the basement of her home in Mokena.

Mrs. Felton, who had conducted a rooming house since the death of her husband, Adam Felton, two years ago, had apparently gone to the basement to replenish the fire when her clothes became ignited as flames shot from the furnace door. The accident is believed to have been caused by an accumulation of coal gas in the firebox.

Although there were others in the house at the time, her predicament was not discovered until Miss Marie Marching, a roomer, heard feeble moans coming from Mrs. Felton's bedroom. Rushing to the aid of the injured woman Miss Marching attempted to make her comfortable and then ran to the nearest telephone to summon a physician.

Severely burned about the head and shoulders, the aged woman was rushed to the St. James hospital in Chicago Heights where she passed away a few hours later. Despite the extensive burns, she had crawled on her hands and knees up to the outside stairway from the basement, into the house and to her bedroom, before calling for aid.

Mrs. Felton was well known in the Mokena community, where she had resided for the past twenty-nine years. She was born in Tinley Park and continued to reside there until her marriage to Mr. Felton in 1887. For a number of years they lived in Green Garden.

Survivors in the immediate family are a brother, Henry Brandau of Tinley Park, and four children, Mrs. Laura Warneke of Chicago; Mrs. Amanda Hull, Mrs. Ada Norman and Henry Felton, all of Mokena. Nine grand children and one great grand child also survive.

Funeral services were held Monday afternoon from the late home at one o'clock to the St. Paul Evangelical and Reformed church in Mokena.

Mokena Business Men's Association Facing Crisis

At a meeting of the Mokena Business Men's Association held Monday night it was disclosed that an acute emergency exists within the organization. Of late the membership has not been attending the meetings very well and a spirit of indifference and lack of co-operation has developed. This matter has got to such a stage that the continued existence of the association is threatened.

As a result of this situation a show-down of the membership as to whether or not they will support the organization whole heartedly or whether they are willing to disband will come to a head at a special meeting called for next Tuesday night, March 3rd at 8 o'clock at the Mokena School Auditorium.

The Mokena Business Men's Association was organized late in the fall and has been giving weekly awards of $20 to stimulate business and have been successful in their attempts to create more business. More new customers have been brought to town and many old accounts have been paid up as a result of the activities of the Association.

Every Saturday night even during the inclement weather of the last few weeks more autos have been seen in town and more people have been trading here than was the case before the Business Men's Association became active.

The old officers of the Association were re-elected by acclamation Monday night.

Matteson Man Given Diploma By Radio Institute

Sheldon Whitcomb, of Matteson, Illinois, has completed his course in practical and theoretical radio, and has been awarded his diploma by the National Radio Institute of Washington, D. C.

Mr. Whitcomb finished the prescribed course of technical studies with creditable grades and is to be congratulated upon his achievements.

Special Services Usher In Lent

Lent was ushered in Wednesday known as Ash Wednesday. Special services were held in the Lutheran, Evangelical and Catholic churches of this section. Most churches will hold special mid-week Lenten services. See the Church Directory on back page for dates and hours of services.

Mokena Sophomore Class Will Present Play March 6th

Snow, Snow, Snow! You have certainly had enough. So have we sophomores. The first suggestion of spring inspires us to do great things. The inspiration is amply shown you in something we all hope to get soon—"Spring Fever."

Yes, that's the name of our play. A rollicking comedy of adolescent youth—just as we actually are.

The cast of characters is as follows:

Jacki Howard—Howard Jungels. Price Howard—Russell Nelson. Ray Butler—H. Strassenburg. Mr. Knight—William Abbe. Peggy Howard—Eileen Walsh. Bertha Howard—Dorothy Hall. Eulie Barnes—Ada Semmler. Donna Howard—Grace Warning. Spring Byington—B. Hostert. Tessie—Jeanette Cooper.

The play will be held in the school auditorium, Friday night, March 6, at 8 o'clock.

Frankfort Dealer Puts On Oliver Days

An event to which the farmers of Will County and southern Cook County have looked forward to for a long time is "Oliver Day" to be held at the Raymond Warning implement shop and garage at Frankfort on March 4th and 5th.

The latest in tractors, tractor tools, threshing machines, combines, hay tools, fellovors, drills, plows, discs, harrows, corn planters, cultivators, etc., will be on exhibition and factory men will be on hand to explain all details. The Oliver and New Idea lines will be exhibited.

There will be special entertainment, prizes and free lunch. Farmers from not only this section, but also from Grundy and Kankakee counties are expected to attend this exhibition of farm machinery. The last time a similar exhibition was held was in 1930. It will be every farmer's time well worth spent to attend the two special days mentioned.

Woman Hurt When Foot Is Caught In Frog

Mrs. Josie Willett of Lathrop, Mo., sustained injuries when alighting from the Rock Island train No. 6 arriving in Mokena 7:10 a. m., Monday. As Mrs. Willett stepped from the train, it is supposed her foot became caught in a switch frog throwing her to the ground, causing severe bruises about the body and hands. Dr. E. G. McMahon rendered medical aid. Mrs. Willett is visiting in the home of her son Robert, relief telegrapher for the Rock Island.

Lawrence Dietrich Dies In Hospital

Lawrence Dietrich, of Frankfort, aged 54, died in Silver Cross hospital in Joliet Thursday February 20. He is survived by his widow, Elizabeth; one daughter, Mrs. Horten Fehland of Blue Island; one son, Lawrence Jr.; three sisters, Mrs. Henry Christman of Niles, Mich., Mrs. Edward Schmidt of Udall, Kansas and Mrs. Hugo Kuhne of Joliet.

Funeral services were held Sunday from the Sonntag Funeral Home in Joliet with Rev. Walter Bazel officiating. Burial in Oakwood cemetery, Joliet.

Tinley Talks Go Over Big

The talking moving picture show after a lapse of two weeks was resumed last Saturday by the Tinley Park Business Men's Association in the Tinley Park School auditorium and drew a very large crowd.

The weekly award by the Tinley Park Business Men of $10 not having been claimed the past two Saturday nights totaled $20 and was won by Fred Schmadeke who resides on a farm near Tinley Park.

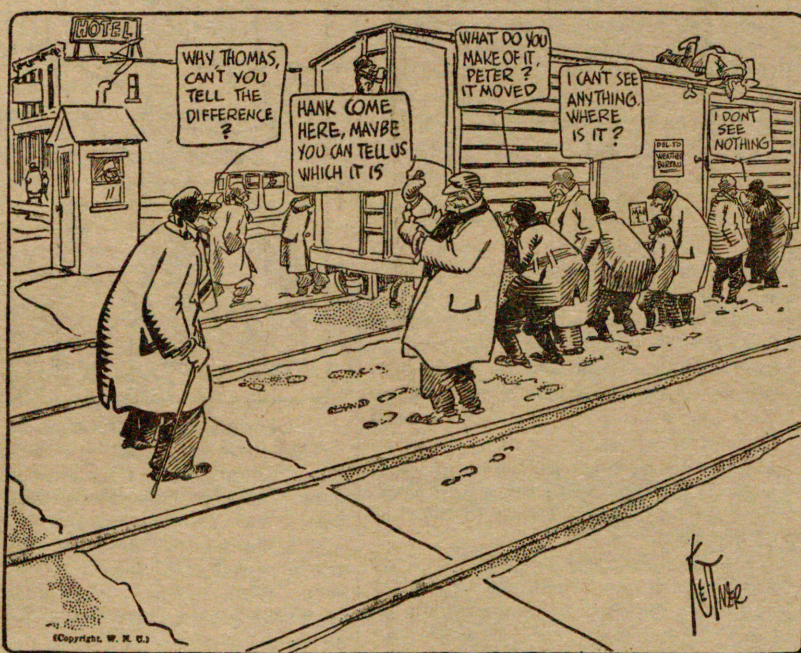

This coming Saturday night another thrilling picture under the title of "Skull and Crown" with Rin Tin Tin Jr., will be shown and the weekly award will also be made. Come and enjoy an evening of good entertainment.

Dyer Team Will Oppose TYO

The Dyers Owls will provide the opposition for the TYO boys, Friday night; the girls are scheduled to play Mokena. There will be two games starting at 7:30 p. m. and the date is February 28th.

Last week found the TYO teams emerging double victors over Lemont. The girls hit their early season stride by bowling over the Lemont girls, 19 to 7. To top this victory the TYO boys spurted to a 40 to 37 win in a closely contested affair.

FRANKFORT COUPLES OBSERVE ANNIVERSARIES

The past week has been one of wedding celebrations in Frankfort. On Sunday afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Philip Stellwagen were surprised in their home in honor of their 40th wedding anniversary. Mr. and Mrs. Stellwagen had gone to visit with the latter's sister, Mrs. Kate Holl who has been in poor health and upon their return home, found a house full of relatives, and plenty of good eats. A purse of money was given to the honored couple and the evening was spent in a social way. About forty-five guests were present. Several guests who had planned to attend were unable to come.

Tuesday evening a group of relatives and friends celebrated the 20th wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Heisner in the Frankfort hall. The evening was spent in a social manner, refreshments were served and all enjoyed a fine time.

Thursday evening Mr. and Mrs. Albert Baumgartner observed their 55th wedding anniversary. The family and friends gathered at the Baumgartner home to honor the couple.

Mr. and Mrs. Baumgartner were married in Chicago in 1880. They located on a farm near Frankfort and resided there for 30 years. Upon retiring from the farm they located in Frankfort and have lived there ever since.

They have seven children living namely Albert, Walter, William, Rose, Mable, Alma and Lillian.

Plans Home Owners Loan Test Case

The Home Owners Loan Corporation at Washington D. C., recently gave to the Associated Press, the information which we pass along to those who may be interested: "That where a borrower was forced to sign a second or junior mortgage as a Trust Deed and Note before he could obtain a loan from the Corporation and it could be proved that the lender had previously signed a 'consent' agreeing to accept Bonds of the HOLC in full settlement of any claim he may have had on the borrower. That the borrower was under no legal obligation to pay the former lender."

But here is the rub: The instrument thus forcefully obtained is recorded and constitutes a cloud upon the title.

T. B. Connelly of Tinley Park is interested in obtaining the names of any one who is paying interest on a Trust Deed and Note or a second mortgage which he was forced to sign, as he is planning a test case and advises not to pay any more interest until the case is decided.

County Jail Bond Issue Is Defeated

That the tax payers of Will County are very definitely opposed to any measure which will have a tendency to increase taxes was vividly shown Tuesday when the special election held on that day showed under the proposition of the county issuing $132,000 bonds with which to build a new county jail. The proposition was defeated 2 to 1.

The vote in this section was as follows:

Frankfort—first precinct, for 23, against 107; Mokena—second precinct for 10, against 61; Green Garden, for 4, against 93; Homer, for 5, against 19; New Lenox—first precinct, for 22, against 51; Second precinct, for 17, against 84.

Embeling Candidate

John Embeling has filed as a candidate for precinct committeeman on the Democratic ticket for precinct one in New Lenox township.

FRANKFORT STUDENT HAS HIGH RATING

Albert H. Krusemark, Jr., son of Attorney and Mrs. A. H. Krusemark of Frankfort has had the rare distinction of earning a straight "A" average for his first semester studies in the college of law at the University of Illinois, out of a class of 200 students. He also has the honor of being the first student of his fraternity to earn this coveted rating in ten years.

This is Mr. Krusemark's first year at the law college. Two other law students, but in the senior class, were straight "A" men.

University officials have indicated that the brilliancy of young Krusemark's work, marks him for probable membership in Phi Beta Kappa national honorary scholastic society. He graduated from the Frankfort public school, the Joliet Township high school in 1932 and from the Joliet Junior College in 1934. He completed his liberal arts course at the state university last year.

Louis Piepenbrink Seeks Office That He Once Held

The political pot is beginning to boil at a good rate in Will County and the various candidates for county offices are calling on the rural voters daily.

Last Saturday Louis H. Piepenbrink, Republican candidate for clerk of the circuit court called on the Mokena voters.

Mr. Piepenbrink is no stranger in politics in Will County. He served as clerk of the circuit court for 12 years and was never defeated for office. Sixteen years ago he stepped aside when Paul V. Wunder the present circuit court clerk entered the race.

Mr. Piepenbrink now feels he should be returned to the office he once held and in which he established an excellent record for efficient service.

The office Mr. Piepenbrink seeks will be voted for at the primaries April 14th. He will appreciate whatever support the voters accord him.

Orland Woman's Club To Meet

The Orland Park Woman's club will hold its regular meeting Friday March 6 at Creer hall.

Mrs. Frank Moore, garden chairman, is having her first garden study meeting at 1 o'clock. The subject which will be handled as a round-table discussion is: "What Should be Done in the Garden During the Month of March."

At 2 p. m. Mrs. Ella Loebe, chairman of International Relations will present Mrs. Cumler, who is a resident of Wilmette, but who has spent many years of her life in Hawaii. She will talk on life in Hawaii and will display many of her beautiful Hawaiian possessions.

She will be assisted by the Misses Weinberger who will sing native songs to ukulele accompaniment.

Creek Overflows Railroad Tracks

Following the mild weather, Monday Hickory Creek rose rapidly and overflowed its banks at various points around New Lenox. Water ran over the Rock Island tracks west of New Lenox. An ice gorge formed near the Moore place west of New Lenox and was loosened by a dynamite charge late in the afternoon. No damage was reported from the rising waters.

Frozen Drains Flood Basement; Water 6 ft. Deep

Due to frozen drains and outlets water backed into the basement of the Harry Daniels place on Keane avenue and 143rd street east of Orland Park the forepart of the week to a depth of 6 feet covering the furnace and leaving the place without heat. Monday night the Orland Fire Department attempted to pump the water out with their fire truck, but after pumping all night until five o'clock Tuesday morning the water was only lowered two inches, so the job was given up.

T-Y-O First Annual Basketball Tournament Coming Soon

The first annual Basketball tournament sponsored by the T. Y. O. of Tinley Park will be held in the Tinley Park School gym on March 10, 11, 13 and 15. There will be three games each night. Games start at 7:30 p. m. Girls and Boys teams will play. The finals will be on Sunday afternoon, March 15th at 2 p. m. Frank Froschauer, ex-Illini star will be the referee. Blue Island Sun-Standard Sponsors Big Tournament

There still is time for all interested teams to join the Open Basketball tournament that the Blue Island Sun-Standard is sponsoring at the St. Benedicts hall, in Blue Island, starting the first week in March.

The tournament, staged to find and honor the best basketball teams in the vicinity, is open to all teams in the States of Illinois, Indiana and Michigan.

A grand array of trophies and individual awards were put on display in the show window of Kranich's Jewelry Store, 13035 S. Western avenue this week. There's a big trophy and individual awards for all players on the first place teams of the light and heavyweight divisions. Second place winners will receive an individual award for all players on their teams.

In addition to these, there will be a cup awarded to the player chosen the most valuable on his team; and another award to the athlete who is high point scorer of the tournament. Entrance fee is small.

All entries must be in the hands of Jimmy Larsen, Sports Editor Blue Island Sun-Standard, 2348 W. Vermont St., Blue Island on or before 6 p. m. Monday, February 24. Any additional information regarding the meet will be gladly furnished any player or club by Mr. Larsen at Blue Island 350.

ORLAND BOY TO GET CHANCE IN MINOR LEAGUE

Eldon Nicolai, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Nicolai of Orland Park, was signed up by Louis Comisky of the White Sox in the Minor League last Thursday. Sometime next week he in company with twenty boys from Chicago will leave for the training camp at Long View, Texas. The trip will be made by bus with all expenses paid.

Nicolai has played on the Parker High School base ball team and the Orland teams and his ambition has always been to become a professional baseball player.

Last season Eldon was a star twirler with the Koehler A. C. club, and his team mates wish him the best of luck.

Tinley Fire Dept. Will Initiate Ten New Members

Next Tuesday evening the Tinley Park Volunteer Fire Department will initiate ten new fire fighters into their department with appropriate initiation ceremonies at the Tinley Park village hall.

Following the initiation a social time will be in order. And don't forget there will be a big feed, half a barrel of beer, smokes, etc. From present reports the feed will be an extraordinary one and no doubt all the guests will come with healthy appetites to do full justice to the feast.

This red-letter event in the Tinley Park Fire Department will take place Tuesday, March 3rd at 8 p. m.

School District 153 Celebrate Jubilee

This Friday night February 28th a program celebrating the 75th jubilee of the founding of School District No. 153 in Green Garden Township will be held in the Green Garden town hall commencing at 8 p. m. The program will be given by the former and present pupils and residents of the district. Everyone is invited.

Flasher Hearing Postponed Again

The hearing which was to have been held Tuesday morning on the installation of electric flashers on the Michigan Central railroad crossing in Frankfort east of the depot, has been postponed until March 10 due to the inability of the attorney for the railroad to appear due to illness. Attorney A. H. Krusemark represents the village of Frankfort.

Tinley Boy On WGN Program

Tinley Park was much interested in the Phillips "66" amateur program on WGN Monday night at 6:45 because one of the home boys of Tinley Park, Milton Lucius gave a radio skit on this program.

Washington.—We have a new farm relief law on the way. The natural and logical question is, what does it mean? A parallel question is, what will it do? And, among the cold and non-partisan analysts of the Washington field one also hears a third question, namely, is the sponsorship of any of the numerous farm plans, Republican or Democratic, sincere?

New Farm Relief Law

Congress, for the sake of its political hide, is anxious to do right by agriculture. It is attempting to supplant the invalidated Agricultural Adjustment act with a law about which its individual campaigning members can talk, to which they can point with pride.

But there are other and unofficial farm plans bobbing up here, there and everywhere. It seems to be the open season for proposals to aid agriculture. Few, if any, of them are grounded completely in sound practice. Each of them ought to be conceded commendation for some of the provisions they include. None of them, including that which is backed by the New Dealers, is going to completely solve the farm problem because we are going to have the farm problem with us for next year and the next and a good many years thereafter whether we like it or not.

The tragedy of the current situation is that the farm relief plans, taken individually or collectively, constitute—I was going to say a mess and on second thought I believe that is the most appropriate word that can be used. Throughout the administration's proposal for aid to agriculture and permeating every other proposal that has been put forward, whether by statesmen or panacea promoters, one can find a splendid collection of objectives that cancel each other. I mean exactly that. Recognizing the breadth of the statement I have just made, evidence seems to be necessary. Let us look at these various plans, or certainly at the one that is scheduled to take the place of AAA.

First, the administration proposes to take something like five hundred million dollars each year from taxpayers in one form or another to use for benefit payments to farmers. It proposes to use these funds to save the soil, to prevent further carrying away of productive elements in our soil by continued cropping. New Dealers describe the purpose as prevention of erosion.

With that purpose, it seems to me there can be no quarrel. Ever since the successive portions of our country were settled and the forest coverings removed, soil has been subject to erosion by rain, by flood and by wind. The Department of Agriculture says that the top soil of probably fifty million acres has been destroyed in that manner. It would seem, then, that it was high time our government was finding ways to stop it.

Admitting the soundness of this phase of the program, one then must turn to another phase that is not written into law but results from it. If the fertility of soil is improved, is it not natural then that there should be an increase in production? And if there is an increase in production, is it not logical further that we may find ourselves developing a huge surplus of commodities from the farm—and with no foreign market? The answer obviously is, yes.

So, we find these two circumstances in the administration farm bill, proposed, even driven, by that group of New Dealers who, until a few months ago, were declaring here, there and everywhere that to maintain price we must have scarcity of production. That theory was basic in the AAA and was carried out to the furthest by Secretary Wallace and Administrator Chester Davis.

I know of no one with a superintelligence sufficient to enable him to picture the result of this combination nor have I heard any argument that was convincing to me, reconciling the previous policy under AAA with that now projected in the new farm relief plan.

There seems to be no doubt among students of the farm problem that a subsidy, whether by that name or some trick phrase, for agriculture cannot be avoided. Some way, somehow, money is going to be taken out of the federal treasury to pay benefits, subsidies, to the farm population. I do not know whether anyone can predict where such a policy will lead as a long-term national program. Political figures seem to be content with a temporary solution, something to get farm votes. In all of the debate that has moved through the ventilators of the house and senate chambers, discussion of the farm problem on a long-term basis has been noticeably absent.

This fact is just as true when anti-New Deal farm programs are subjected to a searching analysis as it is the administration's plan itself. It applies to the proposal of an export bounty, offered by Senator McNary, senate Republican leader; to the plan of George Peek, former AAA administrator, to the piecemeal presentations of Senator Borah, Idaho Republican Presidential prospect or to the ideas advanced by Senator Dickinson, Iowa Republican or any of the others.

Since it seems established that the subsidy idea will and must be kept as a part of any farm policy, the problem is narrowed down to the question of how it will be administered. Each plan provides machinery—political jobs—for administration. That fact, however, would seem to guarantee inefficiency rather than efficiency in administration. Each of the plans obviously must reach into nearly every county in the United States and the experience gained from AAA administration forces the conclusion, regretful as it is, that no efficient means for administration has been suggested.

An unbiased investigation of the whole situation, as far as I have been able to make it, prompts me to say that until partisan politics is eliminated from farm relief considerations, farm aid is going to continue in a mess. Perhaps it is a character of our system of government that the condition exists, but whatever the reason may be, I am convinced that there ought to be a distinction between the giving of a subsidy as such and the giving of a subsidy to accomplish other purposes. I mean by that if we are to have a subsidy, let us not get it all mangled up with a lot of prescribed conditions which bind the farmer hand and foot. I am one of those who believe that the average farmer is better equipped to solve his own problem than are his professional leaders who call themselves heads of farm organizations or the politicians who prate about the farmer and think only in the terms of his voting number. So I say until the farm problem can be separated from politics and until it can be separated from theories of regimentation and crop-control and binding the farmer by a lot of conditions, there will not be any effective solution for the farm problem.

Several years ago, when the present work-relief policy was young, a reader wrote me a rather critical letter because I made the statement that crookedness was bound to crop into administration of the relief programs. My prediction was predicated not upon any clairvoyance or ability as a soothsayer but upon a knowledge of the difficulty that necessarily harasses the management of a far-flung organization. It was predicated as well on an understanding that there was no way on earth to keep politicians and visionaries out of these organizations. I had no apology to make to that reader then but I do have the privilege of boasting just a bit since administrative heads of these organizations in Washington have been put to the necessity of cleaning up one dirty problem after another. It has happened in countless places, not with the consent of the ruling authorities, that petty grafters have crept in, have taken their toll.

Now, however, evidence is seeping through to the top in record form, of another danger in the attempted management of so many different groups from a central office in Washington. The best illustration of this that I have seen comes from New York where the local relief organization has a "writers' project" in operation. Just at this time the local New York authorities, with the assistance of Washington headquarters, are trying to find out whether radicals, many of them of foreign birth, have taken charge of the New York "writers' project."

One man, Samuel McCoy, assistant director, has been dismissed. He has charged that reds are in control and that they are taking up their time proselytizing and seeking new members of a Communistic organization.

Against his charges, those he attacked countered with accusations that McCoy has continuously sought to promote Fascism among the writers.

It is an unhappy thing to occur. Here we have a paternalistic federal government seeking to provide people with work and some measure of compensation for that work, and we see a political problem injected into it. I do not know what the end will be, nor is it pertinent to this discussion. The point is, after all, that it represents, indeed it proves, the futility of attempting to run all of these things from Washington. Those who favor the old idea of states' rights certainly cannot want for ammunition in defense of their beliefs.

"Hero" Criminals
Popular interest in criminals long before the present day has gone to the extent of making heroes of murderers and thieves. In 1754 Rev. Mr. Villlette, of London, described a sermon he had heard by a street preacher praising the remarkable skill with which Jack Sheppard, a notorious thief, had escaped from jail and "manfully burst his fetters asunder." Sheppard, as well as Dick Turpin, died in his nearest attire, and the execution of both was just the theatrical show the crowd expected.

ILLINOIS BREVITIES

Peter West, fifty-two, hotel keeper and sportsman, died at Sparland.

Joseph W. Emery, eighty-six, who founded the Channon Emery Stove company 55 years ago and was its president and secretary, died in Quincy.

Dr. Henry Patterson Bagley, former Chicago eye, ear, nose, and throat specialist, died of pneumonia in a hospital at Galesburg, where he had lived for 15 years. He was fifty-nine years old.

Warden Joseph E. Ragen launched an inquiry into the records of the 325 guards employed at the Joliet penitentiary with the intention of weeding out any inefficient or otherwise undesirable men on the pay roll.

Carl J. Swenson, seventy-nine, veteran Rockford furniture manufacturer, died. He was one of the organizers of the Skandia Furniture company in 1889 and was one of its officials until his retirement in 1927. He was treasurer of the Swedish Building and Loan association and a director of the Rockford Machine Tool company at the time of his death.

Six hundred and twenty-five more students are enrolled in the University of Illinois for the second semester than there were a year ago, G. P. Tuttle, registrar, announced. Total registration for this year's second semester is 10,750, compared with 10,125 a year ago. There are 9,760 in Urbana and 990 in the university's professional schools in Chicago. Comparable figures a year ago were 9,122 and 1,003.

Ernest Lieberman, chief engineer of the Illinois State Highway department, was elected president of the Mississippi valley conference of state highway departments at the final meeting of the group in Chicago. He succeeds W. F. Rosenwald, maintenance engineer of the Minnesota highway department. H. H. Harrison, traffic engineer in the Illinois department, reported that during the last year 25,000 reflecting traffic signs had been placed throughout the state.

Funeral services for Col. Ashbel V. Smith, former state's attorney of Lake county, who died suddenly, were held at Christ Episcopal church, Waukegan, in which city he lived. The body was placed temporarily in a mausoleum. Colonel Smith died unexpectedly of a heart attack in Victory Memorial hospital in Waukegan. He had been suffering from a kidney ailment for a year, and had been a patient in the hospital for a week. He was fifty-nine years old.

Three snow plows manned by highway maintenance men cleared a path through 10-foot drifts near Canton to the home of Mrs. Thomas Dickson, who is seriously ill. The men, assisted by state highway policemen, cleared four miles of road so physicians might reach the home. The work was done under orders from Governor Horner, to whom an appeal was made by relatives and friends. Mrs. Dickson's husband died suddenly in the yard of his home recently.

Settlement of the distillery workers' walkout which led to a paralyzing 52-hour general strike in Pekin returned that industrial town to normal conditions. J. E. O'Connor, federal mediator, announced the distillery agreement at nearby Peoria and it was ratified quickly by the strikers. It included: Restoration of seniority rights for all workers; rehiring of discharged employees; reinstatement of all strikers without prejudice; establishment of an eight-hour day and forty-four week with time and one-half for overtime; recognition of American Federation of Labor unions and establishment of shop committees to discuss grievances.

Printing presses at Springfield began to turn out application blanks for the Illinois $15 a month old age pension, and the organization of machinery to distribute the money got under way. Pension Superintendent James A. McAndrews selected 50 employees as the nucleus of the state central staff and asked downstate county judges to appoint at once the county welfare boards which are to handle the distribution of the pensions. Under a law which the general assembly passed over the veto of Governor Horner, the judges must choose these boards by February 17 and must not name more than two members from one political party.

Co-operation of all Illinois doctors and hospitals in bringing to the attention of persons involved in accidents the state law requiring reporting of accidents is being sought by the state highway department, it is announced by Ernst Lieberman, chief highway engineer. "The traffic act includes a provision requiring the driver of a motor vehicle involved in an accident resulting in injury to or death of any person to make a written report of the accident within 24 hours directly to the traffic engineer, division of highways, Springfield," Mr. Lieberman says. "One hundred per cent reporting is necessary in order to have complete and accurate figures on which to base our traffic accident studies and highway safety campaign."

Thomas M. Dickson, owner of the Dickson Indian mounds near Lewis-town, is dead. His body was found near the entrance to one of the mounds. Mr. Dickson discovered the mounds on his farm and with his son, Dr. Don Dickson, developed them.

Clarence Rupp, thirty-six, Pekin cab line owner, who was wounded in violence that accompanied the general strike there, was shot and killed at his home. His brother-in-law, William Joseph Potts, twenty-three, son of W. A. Potts, a prominent Pekin attorney, surrendered and said he killed Rupp in self defense.

Devil Dislikes Blue

In Mexico there's a superstition that painting the windows of a house blue will keep the devil away. Many home owners in the United States are adopting the custom—if not the superstition—and are selecting blue as a trim color for the exterior of their homes.

GIRL OF THE MOMENT

By R. H. WILKINSON

© Associated Newspapers.—WNU Service.

BEING from the West, Gladys could not be expected to know of Ruy Winslow's fame, either as a football hero—or a Romeo.

The day after her arrival, Creighton played Fletcher, a nearby institution that had long cherished dreams of chalking up a victory over the local school. It was a hard-fought game. Creighton won, but only by virtue of the skill of Ruy Winslow, who scored the deciding touchdown in the last two minutes of play with a 90-yard run.

That night at the victory ball, Gladys and Ruy were introduced. They danced together four times running. During intermission they left the gym and strolled out onto the athletic field and sat down on the tier of bleachers. It was clear and warm, with the smell of fall in the air. They sat for a long time without speaking. Finally Gladys said, attempting a lightness she did not feel: "How does it seem to be a great football hero, with a whole college at your feet?"

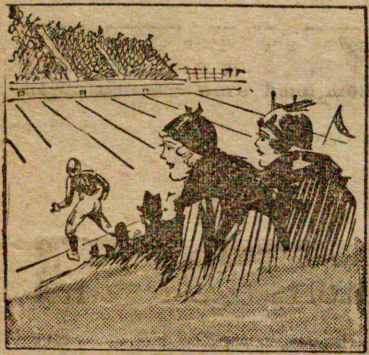

"Not so good," said Ruy, honestly. "I'm not kidding myself that it means anything. Fifty miles from Creighton no one's ever heard of me. I play only because I like to play."

Which was what Gladys wanted to hear him say. She was silent, conscious of a curious sense of delight, of thrilling apprehension. And when, presently, he took her into his arms, she yielded, lifted up her lips to be kissed.

Gladys prolonged her visit. She prolonged it because she couldn't bear to leave Ruy. For the first time in her life she was completely, deliciously happy.

Margot Garrison, whom Gladys was visiting, sensed that her friend's regard for the great Ruy Winslow was more than superficial. Realizing it, Margot took it upon herself to perform a disagreeable but dutiful task. After the dance which followed the Martinville game, she came into Gladys' room and sat down on the bed beside her.

"Gladys, I'm going to tell you something because I'm your best friend and Gladys' Lips Were Close-Pressed, Her Cheeks a Shade Whiter Than Usual.

I think you ought to know. It will probably hurt." She paused. "Shall I go on?"

"Of course," said Gladys.

"It's about Ruy. Gladys, Ruy's a football hero—a greater hero here than Red Grange is to the nation. And being a hero and handsome and likable, he's naturally a desirable companion. Do you follow me?"

Gladys laughed. "If you mean, do I know about his other affairs, he's told me about them."

Margot shook her head sadly. "He's told the others, too. I mean, every fall and winter and spring he has an affair—just like the one he's having with you. He tells them all about his past interests in women. It's clever of him. The girl of the moment thinks he's being honest, that his love is sincere, else he wouldn't make the confession." Margot stood up. "Well, there it is, darling."

Gladys didn't sleep much that night. She tried not to think or lend credence to what Margot had said—and failed. The next day she remained alone, thinking it all over. Margot, of course, had been trying to be kind. Gladys didn't believe that Ruy Winslow was merely having an affair with her.

Yet there was a doubt. There would always be a doubt—until Margot's warning was proved wholly unjustified.

Two days later Ruy came up to spend the evening. The Garrisons were out. Ruy, kissing Gladys, sensed that something was wrong. He held her off and stared into her eyes. She returned his look evenly.

"Ruy, do you love me more than anything else in the world?"

"You know that, sweetness. I'll always love you."

"Do you love me enough—not to play in the Stanboro game next Saturday, if I asked you not to?"

He laughed. "Let's cut the kidding, darling. I've more important things to talk about."

"I'm not kidding. I mean it. I don't want you to play Saturday."

"Listen, sweet, you're not serious. Stanboro's the biggest game of the season. They're depending on me. It'll be my last chance to play for Creighton."

"Which is exactly why I'm asking you not to—if you love me."

Ruy stared. He was puzzled, scornful. "So that's it? They hired you to come down here—to make love to me and to ask me not to play against them. It's all clear—"

"Is it? If you think that, you don't love me! Otherwise, you'll have faith enough in my regard for you to do as I ask without demanding an explanation."

tain. We'll let this be a test—of your love for me and mine for you."

The stands were packed that Saturday. This was an important day at Creighton, and the surrounding countryside. It was a gay crowd, enthusiastic, excited, thrilled with the prospect of seeing Ruy Winslow in his last college football game. Sitting with the Garrisons, Gladys' lips were close-pressed, her cheeks a shade whiter than usual.

Presently a whistle sounded. Out onto the field came the Creighton boys, greeted by a wild roar of applause. Gladys grew tense. She strained forward—and a great wave of relief and joy surged through her. Ruy was not among the eleven Creighton players who were lining up.

At the half, Stanboro was ahead 13-7. Creighton fans were moaning, yelling for Ruy Winslow. And then suddenly a mighty cheer rent the air. A player, tugging at his helmet, suddenly appeared from the sidelines. It was Ruy Winslow!

There is no need to go into details about the remainder of the game. Suffice it to say that Ruy carried the ball over for the tying touchdown, and kicked the winning point. He was carried off the field in a blaze of glory.

That evening, on the lower tier of the bleachers, Gladys looked up into Ruy's face and smiled happily. "Oh, darling, I knew you wouldn't fail me. I knew the things they said weren't true—that's why I came down during the half and asked you to play."

And Ruy, taking her into his arms, smiled happily, too. He loved this girl, would always love her. No need, he thought, to cast a shadow over their lives by telling her that it had been Coach Brady who had kept him out during the first half, saving him for what it would take in the third and fourth quarters to bring Creighton victory.

Where Salt Is More

Precious Than Gold

An arab trailing across the parched waste of the Sahara carries a little bag of dirty white powder, which he values as highly as his water-skin. Every year hundreds of Tibetans leave their lonely homes on "The Roof of the World" and brave the hazards of a 9,000-foot descent down blizzard-swept mountains in order to toil back with a few pounds of the same substance. In many places a sack of it is richer, and a pigmy in Central Africa will exchange his wealth for a teaspoonful, or murder you for it if there is no other way of getting it. What is this strange commodity that they risk their lives to obtain? Something we can buy here for a penny a pound, yet a million times more precious than gold—common salt. Nobody, unless they have been in a country where it is scarce, can understand the terrible craving for it.

Few people realize that it is because the white man's blood is saline that cannibals consider him such a delicacy; or that the superstition connected with the spilling of salt is a distant echo of some country where to waste it was indeed a crime. In the East a man who eats another man's salt at his table binds his honor to do him no injury.

At certain seasons the American buffalo used to stampede in vast herds, driven by some blind instinct to parts of the ranges where the earth threw up salt. In the forests of Central and South America, and parts of India, may be seen deep pits and grooves gouged out of the solid rock face. They are the tongue-marks of millions of animals who since time began have licked out the life-giving salt.

In Europe there is so much salt that in many cases mines are only worked for a few months of the year; yet sometimes we are salt starved, says Tit-Bits Magazine. Much of the salt which reaches us is so highly refined that it lacks minute traces of certain chemicals. That is why the waters of famous spas are so valuable. But chemists have compressed into tablet form the vital qualities they yield. If the new medicinal product is successful we will be able to take a health spa cure in our own homes.

Tattoos 50,000th Subject

Prince Villar, Scotland's only tattooist, has completed his fifty thousandth subject after tattooing busily in Glasgow for 35 years. "My longest job," he said, "took 36 hours, working in four-hour shifts. It was a representation of the Garden of Eden on a man's chest." Villar has tattooed some explorers who wanted identification marks. He tattooed many miners for the same reason. "Some tattoos may cost $250, but the usual kind, such as a heart pierced by an arrow on your arm, costs only 25 cents, and takes only ten minutes to complete. Some men want to have their sweetheart's name tattooed, but I always try to persuade them to have some non-committal phrase, such as 'To my darling,' instead."

Peanut Into Toothpaste

Surely the humble peanut takes some beating, says Pearson's Weekly. A scientist has discovered the three-hundredth way of using it. He can turn peanuts into soap or toothpaste, vanishing cream or pickles, chocolate or sauce, caramels or washing powder, quinine, linoleum, rubber, or cooking lard, salad oil, cheese and milk, vegetable dyes or ice cream, axle grease and a wonderful oil which is said to cure infantile paralysis.

A Tip to Golfers

THE favorite food of the Kansas species of the famous philly-loo bird is lost golf balls. So when a golfer drives a ball down the middle of the fairway and then isn't able to find it, he knows at once that a philly-loo bird has swooped down and gobbled it up. Since this strange bird is invisible, of course, the golf ball becomes invisible also.

But W. M. Huff of the Chaffin (Kan.) Clarion has developed a plan for outwitting the philly-loo. He tells about it as follows:

"My method is to use specially-prepared balls as bait. You take some red and white striped stick candy and dissolve it in hot water, making striped paint. Paint the golf balls with this striped paint and when the philly-loo bird swallows the ball the paint will still be visible so you can locate the bird."

"The best way to kill it is to cut out a section from the heart of a tornado, where the air pressure is greatly reduced by the whirling motion. Armed with this section of rarified atmosphere you get as close as possible to the bird and throw the rare atmosphere all over him. Then the bird just flies to pieces and the ball drops at your feet. Simple, isn't it?"

Right Good Butter

VERMONT is noted for its maple sirup but it ought to be noted also for its dairy products—that is, if Uncle Joe Stokes' cow had ever become well-known outside of the little town in the Green mountains where he lived. She was a mighty fine cow, but Uncle Joe had a lot of trouble with her one time or another. Always wandering off somewhere, she was just chock-full of curiosity.

One day when the door of Uncle Joe's ice house was open she strolled into it, and when the wind blew the door shut she was trapped. He didn't find her for three days, and when he did he had to put on fur mittens to milk her. Then, blamed if she didn't give nothing but ice cream!

Uncle Joe's family was getting tired of nothing but ice cream for dessert, when finally the cow seemed to thaw out a bit. But the next day she wandered over to a marble quarry. When the men blasted out a big slab of the stone the explosion shook her up so that for the next week she didn't give anything but butter.

But fine butter it was—cool and firm and hard. Then a hot spell came and Uncle Joe was afraid the butter might spoil. So he took it down to a shady nook and put it on a big stone. Up, up, up went the thermometer that day and Uncle Joe began to worry about his butter. Finally he went down to look at it.

"Well, sir," says Uncle Joe, "I found that that stone had melted and run away. But the butter was all right."

Taming a Tornado

THE Old Cattleman perched himself on the top rail and squinted through the dust at the little bay pitching and squealing around in the middle of the corral.

"Reminds me of the time Pecos Bill met that tornado up on the Kansas line," he remarked. "She sure was a twister, all right. But Bill eared her down and climbed on. Off she went, down across Texas, sun-fishin', back-flippin', doin' everything a bad hoss ever thought of doin'."

"But Bill just set up there, thumbin' that tornado in the withers, slappin' her across the head with his sombrero or fannin' hisself with it. Up ahead he seed a forest that stretched away for miles and miles. But after him and his tornado bronc had passed it was nothin' but a barren prairie—the Staked Plains. They calls it today."

"He rode her through three states but over in California she got him. When the tornado saw she couldn't toss him, she just rained out from under him. Yep, that's how the Grand Canyon came to be washed out in that part of Arizona."

"Bill he come down ker-plunk in the southern part of the Golden state and when he lit he made a big hole three hundred feet below sea-level. I reckon you know it as Death Valley. . . . What, you don't believe it? Jest go down there, then, and take a look. You'll see the print of his hip pockets in the solid rock. . . . What more proof do you want, anyway?"

Pepper Used as Spice

Pepper is one of the oldest spices known. Hippocrates used it as a medicine. Pepper differs from most other spices in this, that its pungency resides not in the volatile parts or essential oil, but in a substance of a more fixed kind, which does not rise in the heat of boiling water. The pepper-corn which, when ground, is the familiar black or white pepper, grows on a creeping vine, usually at its best in the moist heat of a low-lying tropical forest. When pepper is cultivated on a large scale it is a common practice to plant trees to support the creeper and provide shade. When the berries are changing from green to red they are collected, and dried in the sun until they become black and shriveled. Ground in this condition, they produce black pepper. If white is required the black skins are removed.

Throw Me a Cable, Captain, and I'll Give You a Tow!

A man in search of a quiet holiday set out in a small sailing boat, his only equipment consisting of provisions and a wireless set. He sailed serenely for several days, until at last he sighted one of those liners which resemble small towns rather than ships, says the London Observer. The appearance of the little boat created excitement on board the liner, which slowed down.

The captain was wondering whether it was a matter of going to the rescue when the holiday maker moved to his transmitter and tapped out the message: "Is there anything I can do for you?"

FARMERS everywhere are enthusiastic in their praises of the Firestone Ground Grip Tire—they say it's the greatest traction tire ever built, and so economical. How was it possible for Firestone to build such a remarkable tire? Firestone patented construction features are the answer. Gum-Dipping, a process that soaks every cotton fiber in every cord with pure liquid rubber, prevents internal friction and heat and gives the cord body greater strength to withstand the stresses and strains of heavy pulling at low air pressures.

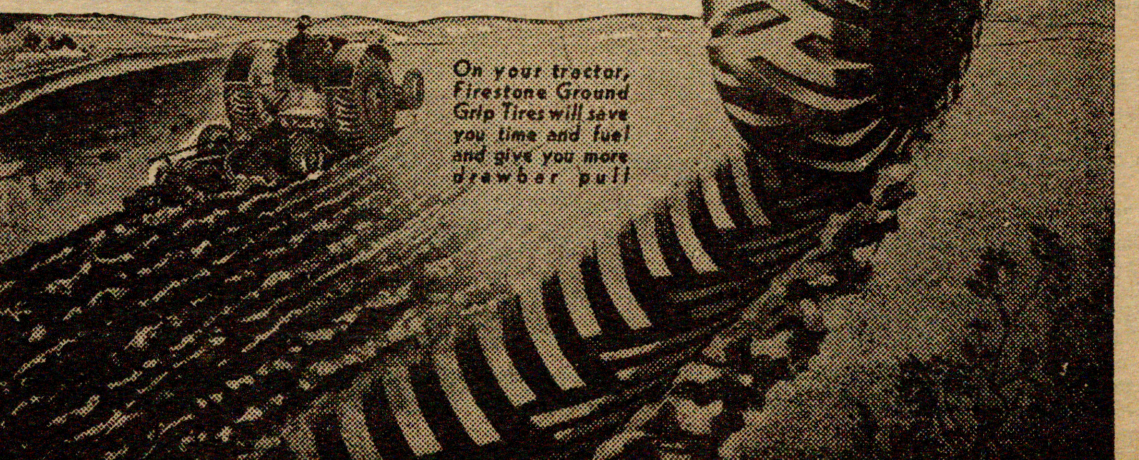

The patented feature of two extra layers of Gum-Dipped cords under the tread locks the massive super traction tread securely to the body of the tire. This patented Ground Grip tread is made wider, heavier and deeper, with scientific spacing between the bars so that the tire is self-cleaning, yet rides smoothly on improved roads. These patented construction features are used only in Firestone Tires. This is why you get greatest traction, longest life and outstanding performance in Ground Grip Tires. They are the best investment a farmer can make.

Equip your car, truck, tractor and farm implements with new Firestone Ground Grip Tires and save yourself time, money and hard work. See this remarkable tire at your nearby Firestone Auto Supply and Service Store, at your Tire Dealer, or at your Implement Dealer. Remember, when buying farm equipment specify Firestone Ground Grip Tires for greatest efficiency and economy.

NEW LENOX

By Delores Walsh

The New Lenox Flashes Girls basketball team won from the Mokena Girls by an overwhelming score of 14 to 0 in a good game played at the New Lenox gymnasium, Tuesday night. The Boys Lightweights also won from the Mokena Boys by a score of 49 to 35. The Boys Heavyweight team lost to Mokena by a score of 51 to 37 in a very fast game.

These three home teams will play again on Tuesday night, March 3, in the New Lenox gym—the Flashes playing the Champion Chaney Girls, and the boys playing the Brooklyn Recreational club boys of Joliet, two games.

Miss Lillian Carey who has been ill in her home is able to be out again.

Rita Hauser is back to work again after a two week's illness in her home.

Mrs. Henry Krohn is recovering
after an illness.

Mr. A. W. Walsh was on the sick list last week.

A group of friends and relatives gathered together and surprised Mr.
and Mrs. J. R. Krohn in honor of the 23rd wedding anniversary recently.

A meeting was held Thursday night at the home of Mr. Steven Roebel, South Cedar Road, for the purpose of organizing a local unit of the National Union for Social Justice. This new unit of a nationwide organization will be glad to welcome any persons who are interested in the political philosophy of Father Charles E. Coughlin, as outlined in his nation-wide broadcast every Sunday afternoon. All temporary membership cards for 1934-1935 have been cancelled by Father Coughlin. Persons being identified with the movement must join a local unit.

Miss Lorraine Tauber entertained the New Lenox Flashes club in her home Thursday night. Both basketball and kittenball were discussed.
This meeting was to have been the regular kittenball meeting. Coach Paul Stettler, was a guest at this meeting and talked on both basketball and kittenball. Plans were made for a card and bunco party to be given by the Flashes kittenball team at the New Lenox gymnasium on Tuesday night, April 21. This party is being given in order to start the team in equipment needed. Bette MacIntyre is General Chairman of the affair, with the following committee assisting her: Mrs. Howard Johnson, Beulah Emiley, Lorraine
Tauber, Delores Walsh, Doris Urch, Lillian Carey, Germaine Donnelly, and Rita Hauser.

Following the meeting Airplane
Bunco was in play at three tables;
prizes being awarded to Miss Germaine Donnelly and Rita Hauser.
After the games a two-course luncheon was served at one long table.
Others present were: Mildred Taylor, Marjorie Jensen, Doris Pugh and Beatrice Walsh.

Miss Rita Hauser will entertain the club again on Friday night, March 20th.

The Pirate Pinocle club gathered together Thursday night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Francis at a party in honor of their 21st wedding anniversary.

Pinocle was in play at four tables, prizes being awarded to Mrs.
Alfred Emiley and Mr. Raymond Osmus. Consolation prizes were awarded to Mrs. Eunice Urch and Raymond Brown.

A Chili supper was served at midnight at individual tables.

Mrs. Helen O'Rourke underwent a major operation Wednesday, February 19 in Silver Cross hospital.

Mrs. Roscoe Ridgeway is on the sick list.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Reed and daughter Charlene Marie have returned to their home in Chicago after spending the week-end here with their parents Mr. and Mrs. Jack Minicus and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Fetters.

Mr. Earl Roth is ill in his home.
Mrs. William Sayers is ill in her home.

Mrs. Oscar Scherpe and Mrs.
Ben Scherpe are spending several days here with Mrs. Louis Scherpe.

The postponed bakery sale to have been held in the Archie Corp and Dorothy Osmus stores Saturday, Feb.
22, will be held on Saturday, Feb.
29 instead.

Mr. Alfred Bethel has received word of the death of his brother, James Bethel at his home in Clarion, Iowa; but was unable to attend the funeral because of bad road conditions in Iowa. Mr. Bethel resided in New Lenox for many years.
He is survived by three daughters.
Mrs. Bethel died two years ago.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Roth will entertain the Alpha 500 club in their home on Thursday night, March 5.
Mrs. Abner Kercheval will be the assisting hostess.

St. Jude's Catholic Church card party held Wednesday night, was a huge success. Games were in play at fifty tables.

Word has been received here of the birth of a son, Everett Charles Jr., to Mr. and Mrs. Everett Maina of Chicago. Mr. Maina has many friends here, having lived here a few years.

Several New Lenox folks attended
the Annual Oyster Supper, Card Party and Dance held Thursday night at the Colonial hall and sponsored by the Maple Street Arbor Ancient Order of Greeners.

Mr. and Mrs. Ted Hobson and son spent the past week-end in Chicago with Mr. and Mrs. Fred Shields.

Miss Ramona Fink spent the past week-end in Chicago with her sister
Julia and other friends.

Mrs. Edward Francis will entertain the Woman's Missionary Society at her home on Thursday, March 12.
Miss Beulah Emiley is spending a week in Harvey with Mr. and Mrs.
William Fowler.

MOKENA SCHOOL NEWS

The Intermediate room pupils have been busy decorating their room since they have resumed studies of it.

Gordon Clevenger has drawn a picture of George Washington's home.

Bob Homerding made the highest mark in the Fifth grade geography test. His mark was 98.

In the Fourth grade three pupils received a hundred in their geography test. They were Virginia Ne-becker, Jean Shevlin and Marjorie Marti.

The Sixth grade pupils made some interesting maps showing the trade routes of the Middle Ages.

The Seventh grade have some fine
maps on exhibition.

The Junior Hi. pupils have just completed their study of the heart.
Many pictures have been drawn during their course of study.

After a long absence due to illness Kenneth Warning has returned to school.

The High School pupils have been holding classes in the gym while their room is painted.

Joe Lawrence has returned to school.

Mr. Dunn attended a meeting of the Will County Principals and Superintendents Association in Joliet, Saturday. Highlights of the meeting were the election of officers, drawings for the Will County Grade Tournament and a delicious chicken dinner.

The following officers were elected: President, Mr. Rasier, Fairmont; Vice President, Mr. Walters, Peo-tone; Secretary, Mr. Monge, Chaney.

The first problem to be studied by the association will be the adaption of textbooks for the county schools.

Special

The assembly programme given by the primary room last Friday was enjoyed by the pupils and the many visitors. Many poems and readings were given about St. Valentine's Day and George Washington. The two opening songs sung by the whole assembly were American and Auld Lang Syne.

On March 6 the Sophomore class of the high school will present a play entitled "Spring Fever". So remember to keep that date open so you can attend the performance.

Sports

The High School team played Peo-tone last Wednesday night. The Grade team drew Frankfort in the Will County Tournament and play their first game Thursday, March 12, at 4 p. m.

Last Friday night the Mokena teams split with New Lenox. The High School winning 29 to 23 and the Grades losing 27 to 6.

The next meeting of the Mokena
Garden Club will be held at Mrs. J.
Walsh's residence next Tuesday afternoon, March 3, at 2 p. m.

Frank E. Huser night telegraph operator at the local Rock Island depot has returned from Rock Island where he was called on extra dispatcher duty during the severe cold spell.

The village board will meet Tuesday night in monthly session.

A very light vote was cast here Tuesday at the special election on the Will County jail bond issue. The vote here was 10 in favor and 61

against the proposition.

Mr. C. D. Gaddis who is engaged in timber work near Galesburg was home for a few days last week.

Karl Kraus has been appointed by the Public Service to check and report on the gas pressure in Mokena. He has to make an hourly report each night. This precaution is being taken by the Public Service to eliminate any danger of a gas freeze-up.

Last Thursday night a gas line on 80th avenue northeast of Mokena froze up and Public Service men called on every gas user in Mokena to check the pilot lights and all gas was shut off until the proper pressure was restored. The frozen main was thawed out with alcohol which was pumped into the main.

The high wind Wednesday night blew out all the pineapple lights guarding the open water main trenches on Niethammer avenue.
Part of the chimney on St. Mary's Catholic church was also blown down. The street lights were also out of commission for several hours and come on late in the night.

Tuesday night the six o'clock west bound suburban train was delayed for 17 minutes when a journal on one of the coaches developed a hot box. The train was side-track-ed until the flaming box was put out and new packing put in.

County G. O. P. Declines Bid For Meeting

A refusal to take part in any attempt or plan by a minority group to dictate a slate of Republican state candidates, prior to the primary provided by law, and thus deprive men and women voters of Illinois of their legal and moral right to select their own candidates in the primary, came today from Victor McBroom, chairman of the Kankakee County Republican Central committee.

The county committee had been asked to send a representative to a meeting at Springfield on Monday, the purpose of which is to draft a slate of Republican state candidates. The request came from a so-called "citizens harmony committee" of which Paul Samuel is chairman.

Sends Telegram

With a comment that the committee actually is seeking to further the candidacy of its own particular set of office seekers, Mr. McBroom immediately sent a telegram to the committee as follows:

"The real Republicans of this locality will take no part in any meeting called for the purpose of depriving the people of the right to select candidates of their own choice. We are charging the Democratic administration with dictatorship. You should not follow them. I have confidence in the judgment of the Illinois voters and after they have made their choice then it is the duty of all Republicans to elect the nominee."

Former Governor Len Small, an independent Republican, whose candidacy came as the result of a movement begun by the Kankakee County Republican committee, has repeatedly refused to ally himself with any minority group which sought to further the interests of any favored set of candidates.

Lehr In Race For State Auditor

George Oscar Lehr has filed his petition for the office of Auditor of Public Accounts. He opened his campaign last Labor Day at the Republican Rally held at Riverview Park. Planks in his platform are:

To adopt every measure to economize the public expense without affecting the efficiency of his organization.

To liquidate the closed banks in as short a time as possible.

HOMER

Mrs. Fred Kopelman

Many Homer friends of Mrs. Margaret Weber were sorry to hear of her death, which occurred on Wednesday morning after a lingering illness. Mrs. Weber was seventy years old at the time of her death and was well known throughout this community. She leaves to mourn her loss, her husband, Nicholas, two sons Peter and Sylvester and one daughter, Mrs. Nile White, two sisters, Mrs. Catherine Ehrfield and Mrs. Mary Mertons, and also six grandchildren. Funeral services were held Friday morning at St. Joseph's church in Lockport. Burial was at St. Alphonsus cemetery, Lemont.

Complimentary to Mr. Henry Holm's birthday, Mrs. Holm entertained their children and families at dinner on Sunday, Feb. 9. Mr. Holm was 79 years old and is in excellent health. The home was beautifully decorated with yellow jonquils and a large birthday cake adorned the table. Despite the terrible storm and sub-zero weather, Mr. and Mrs. Fromkea, daughters Myrtle and Verna and son Christie of Morgan Park and Miss Vivian Holm of Chicago arrived in time for dinner. Then on Monday Mr. and Mrs. Peter Smith, daughters Hazel, Eileen and Lila and son Peter, also Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Lauffer and son Russell were able to break through the snowbanks and bring their greetings to their father.

Ralph Cutler suffered painful burns on the face, hands and arms Sunday when heated oil in a tool shop near his house caused a fire. The flames were extinguished before serious damage was done to the building but the doctor in charge, found that Mr. Cutler was suffering from second degree burns.

Mrs. Adolph Haley visited a portion of the past week with her daughter, Mrs. Lenora Gerhart in Chicago.

Reed Lynn Burch has been ill with the gripe. Mrs. Tillie Nelson is at the Burch home helping care for him.

Mrs. Henry Kinke visited with relatives in Blue Island Wednesday.

A goodly number from this vicinity attended the Oyster supper, card party and dance at the Colonial hall in New Lenox Thursday night. This party was given by the Maple Street Arbor of Gleaners.

Mr. Albert Wergen, who was struck by an automobile and sustained a double fracture of the collar bone, is resting much easier now and has been removed to his home from the St. Joseph's hospital in Joliet.

Clarence Jungles has been very ill at his home with pneumonia. Two trained nurses, Mrs. George Bump and Miss Hazel Parker are caring for him.

Nicholas Weis underwent a major operation at St. Joseph's hospital in Joliet, Saturday morning.

Henry Winke and George Bump, Jr., were business visitors in Chicago Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Heusing and son Donald are spending several weeks at the Morrison home in Lockport, due to the snow storms, which have made auto travel very hazardous.

Mr. and Mrs. T. J. O'Leary were entertained at the home of the latter's mother in Joliet, Thursday.

Mrs. Grace Piggott has been entertaining guests from Lombard the past week.

Elaine Rowley is on the sick list. The Wayside Workers Circle of Kings Daughters will meet at the home of Miss Myra Reed in Lockport on Thursday afternoon, March 4th.

On Sunday evening, March 1st, Rev. H. R. Jay will conduct services at the Homer Congregational church. Sunday school will convene at 10 o'clock on Sunday morning.

Walter Wahlgast of Chicago spent the week-end with his parents here.

The Orland Catholic church sponsored a dance at the Goodings Grove hall Saturday night. A large crowd was in attendance.

A large crowd was in attendance at George Welter's auction sale Saturday and prices ranged good. The ladies of the Wayside Workers Circle of Kings Daughters served lunch.

Approximately fifty people from Homer attended the Novelty Hawaiians dance at the West Lockport Gleaner hall Saturday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Rowley of Chicago Heights were entertained at dinner Saturday evening at the home of the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Rowley in honor of Elmer's birthday.

The Ladies Missionary Society of the Homer Congregational church will hold a meeting in the church parlors Thursday with Mrs. Lizzie Anderson and Mrs. Eugene Anderson as hostess. Pot luck dinner will be served at noon.

Mr. Wm. Waite of Joliet is spending a few weeks at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Eugene Anderson.

Monday night at the fifth annual Joliet Golden Glove amateur boxing tournament at the Catholic High School gymnasium, Frank Hartman, boxing for the Joliet Y. M. C. A. was successful in defeating Tony Belenic of Camp Salt Creek C.C.C. and was awarded a golden glove. Congratulations Frank.

Mr. and Mrs. Matt Wagner are having as their guests this month, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Sajack of Fort Sheridan.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Hoffman of Homer announce the birth of a daughter, born at their home Thursday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Merritt Cagwin and sons were dinner guests Sunday at the home of Mrs. Bell Storm on Maple Road.

The Orland Park Legion Post will sponsor a combined masquerade and St. Patrick's Day dance on March 17 at the Goodings Grove hall.

The dance, which was to have been held last Saturday night, sponsored by the Goodings Grove hall company was postponed, owing to the sub-zero weather and heavy snow.

Little Francis Ott has been ill with influenza.

Midway to the stream channel he stopped where, through separate vistas, he could see both planes. The gray dawn had brightened enough to make them visible at a distance. He sat down on a log to wait. In the Eskimo suit, the cold was negligible.

A look at the constable's pistol showed it to be fully loaded. He took off the belt and buckled it on again under the loose fullness of his parka. Holstered between the caribou skin and his rabbit-fur undersuit, the oil in the pistol mechanism would become warm. Cold oil is apt to jam a gun.

After making sure of the pistol, he had nothing to do except give his face an occasional rub to prevent frostbite. He sat restfully relaxed, as patient as an Eskimo hunter beside a seal hole. Very slowly the gray dawn brightened. It at last began to mellow into gold.

From across the lake came the crack of rifles—three shots in quick succession. Garth told himself that Huxby or his men were hunting moose. He surmised why. The engineer planned to cover the shattered ends of the three-seater plane's floats with rawhide.

The sun glared over the jagged barrier mountains into the frost-gripped valley. Quite a while later, Garth saw one of his four enemies come out of the trees near the lake shore, on the far side of the frozen glacier stream. The man carried a big folded hide on his left shoulder.

A shout turned the man's steps up towards the ford. Other shouts came from the slope above. Garth smiled. It was as he had foreseen. In coming to repair the floats of the three-seater plane, Huxby and his men had formed a line from the lake shore to timberline and searched the spruce woods.

But the hunters had found no trace of their quarry all the way to the bank of the frozen glacier stream. There, however, the snowshoe tracks coming down from the tundra made plain sign even for cheechahoes. Huxby came running along the trail, followed by the man with the moosehide.

Near the plane the engineer stopped for the miner to overtake him. They approached the stranded aircraft warily, with rifles raised, ready to shoot. When nothing happened, Huxby signed for his companion to drop the hide and climb aboard. As the man obeyed, another of the miners came running down the trail.

Huxby was looking at the tracks that led on along the lake shore. The man on the plane peered into the three cockpits. Huxby sighted the cabin plane across the corner of the lake. He shouted and pointed to it, but waited for the second miner to come up before starting on along the trail. The fourth man of the party appeared up the stream bank.

Garth slipped back behind thick cover and swung into a fast pace. He struck the stream bank above the ford. Trees cut off all view of the four trackers. Garth crossed the ice in the open stream bed and found cover again on the west bank. But instead of heading up the gulch, he kept straight on, parallel with the lake shore.

The thought of Lilith amused him. She had been seen only by the miner who had fired down from timberline. At the distance she must have been mistaken for a man. Only a degenerate criminal would knowingly shoot at a woman. But her short snowshoe trail following his own and Dillon's must have shown the trackers that the third member of his party was as helpless as the dead or wounded constable.

They would be perplexed to guess what had become of his two companions. No man could make off with two persons on his back. Even if Huxby had guessed the truth that Dillon was dead and his body aboard the cabin plane, he would be mystified by the puzzle of the third person who, with the snowshoe-runner, had been kept from boarding the plane.

Still smiling, Garth came to the placer camp. The big fire under the gravel-thawing kettles had died down to a bed of coals. The forelegs and hindquarters of the newly killed moose lay in the snow beside the brush lean-to. On the floor mat of spruce sprays, along with the bedding, was a pile of food—bacon, flour, sugar, dried fruit, tea. Back of the food were tight-lidded cans filled with dynamite, coils of fuse, and caps.

Garth jerked up the blankets. Under one set lay the strong canvas bag for which he was looking. He had hoped to find the constable's rifle. But one of the miners must have come to the valley without a gun. The carbine had not been left in camp.

The failure to find the weapon did not alter Garth's plans. Working fast, he filled the three-gallon teapot with packages of tea, salt and sugar. The pot went into an empty floursack, along with a little dried fruit, some dynamite, and a pair each of tin cups, plates and spoons.

On the big stack of fuel beside the lean-to, he piled all the rest of the food and dynamite, the blankets, and the quarters of moose. With a shovel that was leaning against the rocker cradle he tossed coals from the fire into the base of the stack. The wood soon blazed up in several places.

With the floursack pack and the bag of platinum alloy slung over his shoulder, he went downslope.

Garth lugged the sack across the open space and past the stunted spruce beside which Constable Dillon had been murdered. In a drift on the north side of the next tree, he dug a hole, dropped in the sack of alloy, and covered it over.

A backward look at the camp showed the bonfire flaming high. At any moment the frozen dynamite was apt to thaw enough to explode. From off to the left came angry shouts. The direction of Garth's trail had at last warned the pursuers of his raid on their camp. They were heading for it as fast as they could flounder through the drifts.

Instead of circling to double past them again, Garth slanted off downslope towards the west side of the lake. There was no need to warn them about the dynamite. Before he had taken a dozen strides, the frosty air crashed with a thundering explosion. He bent forward and went pounding downhill through the soft snow as if breaking trail for a fast driven dog team.

When he neared the border of the muskig he glimpsed a gray shape in the outer fringe of willows. No wolf could bulk so large. The she-grizzly had been first of the flesh eaters to find what was left of the newly killed moose.

Close looking and listening showed that the cubs of the great bear were not with her. Garth went straight towards the hoggishly feeding beast until she caught his scent. She reared up to gaze her bloody jaws and roared as she had roared at him and Huxby and Mr. Ramill.

Garth very quietly turned to the left and angled off away from her. He was the two-legged creature who had several times shied respectfully around her and her cubs during the summer. She watched him go, then returned to her greedy gorging.

He skirted along the border of the muskig to where a narrow neck of the swamp extended up a little valley to a gulch in the side of the west mountain.

At the far bank he shifted sideways and crouched down behind a clump of willows. He did not have long to wait. Enraged by the destruction of their food and camp outfit and the taking of the platinum alloy, Huxby and his men must have rushed fast down the trail of their bedevil.

From over across the corner of the muskig came the warning roar of the disturbed grizzly. A quick shout followed. Close upon the report dinned an outburst of terrific snarling roars and a whole fusillade of shots. The roars suddenly ceased. But the firing kept up for four or five seconds.

"Scared. Wasting cartridges," Garth told himself. "Hopping mad at me, and, atop that, flurried by her charge. Hope she didn't get any of them."

His wish was soon fulfilled. All four trackers came plodding along the border of the muskig. Huxby was in the lead. But the bearded man next behind shored forward beside him as he came striding out on the bog. Both happened to step two or three times on niggerheads. Then the miner hit the snow between tussocks.

The bearded man's curse as he plunged down into the quagmire jerked Huxby's glance around. He saw the trap a split second too late to keep on the tussocks. Like the miner, he shot down through the frozen crust into the deep slime and mud. The third man followed suit. But he was near shore, where the bog was only kneedeep. The fourth, lagging behind, halted on solid ground.

At Huxby's shouted orders, the last man ran to fetch poles of down timber. The two leaders were in almost to their armpits before the dead aspen trunks could be brought and shoved out to them.

Set on niggerheads, the poles gave support for the trapped men to pull themselves up out of the treacherously sucking quagmire. Other poles made a bridge for them, back to solid ground. But the bearded miner left his rifle down in the ooze.

Garth chuckled and looked to see Huxby backtrack with his men. Instead, the engineer headed up the bog valley towards the gulch. That added to Garth's mirth. By a quick return, the hunters could have stripped off the grizzly's hide before it froze. They were walking away from a rug that would have gone far towards replacing their burnt blankets. He had so tantalized and enraged them that they could think only of revenge.

To add insult to injury, he tramped a heavy trail up into a spruce thicket and built a small fire. Beside the fire, he scattered a handful of dried apricots and prunes. After that he skirted along the edge of the muskig to its north end.

Here he came to where in ancient times, before it started to recede, the glacier had piled a big terminal moraine. This was the immense natural dam that held the lake in its bed.

Among the rocks of the rapids, on the slope of the lower valley below the falls, Garth made out the wreckage of Mr. Ramill's custom-built monoplane.

He worked his way down alongside the rapids to look closer at the wreck. What little had been left of the costly aircraft was not worth salvaging. But the tattered cover of one broken wing thrust up out of the white water within reach from the bank.

Garth started a fire of small sticks. He quenched it with damp moss, and used the charred stick ends to write on the wing fabric:

$5,000 reward for
V. HUXBY Thief and Murderer."

CHAPTER XI

Female of the Species.

Shortly before noon, the four trackers appeared on the moraine. The man who had not been bogged led the way down. Another miner followed, then Huxby. The man who had lost his rifle lagged behind. The two leaders reached the broken monoplane wing. Garth saw them read the writing.

Huxby jumped down beside the miners, to stare at the offer of reward that branded him for what he was. With a curse, he ripped the tattered piece of fabric from the wing frame and flung it down into the foaming rapid.

The two men glanced furtively at each other. Huxby pointed to the trail on the opposite bank and signed for them to lead the way across. Neither moved. The first man cursed, and shouted his refusal:

"Jump them boulders! I ain't no lynx. I'm through trailing that devil."

"Me too," declared the second man. "I won't break my neck for nobody."

A second look at the crossing forced Huxby to shout his agreement: "Curse the devil! We'll chase back. He's going on around to our plane. That's where he must have left both of his disabled companions."

Along with the angry statement, the engineer signed for his miners to start back ahead of him. Garth smiled. The two who had seen that offer of reward would not forget it, and Huxby was keenly aware of the fact.

When all four disappeared up on the moraine, Garth recrossed the boulders. There was no sign of Lilith when he came down from the moraine. He called into the entrance tunnel. Back came a quavering cry of relief. A quick crawl took him in through the low narrow passage.

Lilith was breathing hard, almost gasping. "Oh! oh, thank God! I looked and looked, but I could not see you. I thought you must be—lying there—like that poor policeman—dead!"

"Hardly. Look here—and here." He showed the pistol, then dumped his floursack pack. "How about salt on our meat, and a cup of tea with sugar?"

"Alan!" she cried. "You made them give you all this!"

"In a way—yes. Set a pot of snow on the lamp stone, and slice some meat."

Lilith gazed at him in speechless wonderment, her blue eyes wide and very lustrous. He pretended not to notice. He salted and started to eat the first hot fat caribou steak that she served him on one of the looted tin plates.

But after he had told about the bear scare and the luring of the men into the bog, her surprise found utterance.

"Why didn't you kill the beasts while you had the chance?"

Garth answered with sudden gravity: "For several reasons, my girl. The main ones are because I am not a killer and because I intend that Vivian Huxby shall be tried and hung for murder."

She gasped: "You—hung! But he has all those men to help him. You're alone—worse than alone. I'm only a hindrance."

He smiled banteringly. "Well, I wouldn't say that. A handy cook isn't altogether a nuisance. The pot is beginning to simmer. You might drop in a pinch of tea. How's your ankle?"

"Ever so much better. I've exercised it a little every time I went outside. And I've finally finished my parka. But how—" she interrupted herself—"how can you win if you don't kill them?"

"Why, for a starter, Miss Cook, we'll let them stew in their own juice for a few days. That will tend to soften their bonds of mutual aid. No bedding and a diet of saltless meat will help those three plump jacks to consider the desirability of that five thousand dollar reward I offered for their boss."

"Alan Garth, you're marvelous!"

"Not at all. It just happens I know this game, and I told you before that Huxby is only a commonplace wolf. If he were a wolverine, I'd have to look sharp. As it is, we'll stay up here snug and cosy, and enjoy their tea and sugar while you're learning to use your snowshoes."

By noon the next day Lilith's Eskimo suit was finished. Her ankle, though weak, was no longer sore or swollen. Garth bandaged it firmly with a strip of skin, and had her begin practicing on her webs.

Not being hurried or excited, she soon caught the knack of the snowshoe stride. As her ankle became stronger and her feet hardened she developed into a fairly fast snowshoe runner.

Their last climb took them up around the bend in the great cleft. Before they turned back, Garth had the girl fire the pistol. She neither shut her aiming eye nor flinched as she pulled the trigger. Each time the bullet struck within a foot of the nearby mark that Garth set up.

"Not half bad," he approved. "I'll let you go down with me tomorrow morning."

Though the temperature had become milder, it remained below freezing point. As on the other occasion, Garth started downgulch two hours before dawn. This time Lilith trailed with him.

Huxby had moved his camp to the lake shore opposite the stranded cabin plane. A big fire of birch logs threw its welcome heat into the front of the three-sided lean-to. The engineer and two of his miners lay asleep, huddled in nests of spruce sprays and dry moss.

The fourth man sat on a log beside the fire, his rifle between his knees. He yawned drowsily.

The first slight tinge of dawn had begun to gray the east. But among the trees the night was still black. A sudden flicker of light in the darkness behind the lean-to brought the sleepy watcher's head up with a jerk. Beside the skin-clad man with the lighted match, he saw a second man squinting at him along the barrel of a pistol.

Mexico's Calendar Stone

Carved by Aztec Indians

Among the sights of Mexico City is the famous Calendar stone. It was cut from volcanic rock by Aztec Indians, and the work was done more than four centuries ago, during the reign of the Aztec ruler, Montezuma II, says a writer in the Detroit News. Aztec tribes were in control of Mexico when it was invaded by the Spaniards. The present name of the country is believed to have come from an old Aztec war-god who was called "Mextli" or "Mexitli." It is easy to see how his name could have been changed to "Mexico."

The Calendar stone is on view in a museum in Mexico City. On it is carved a great circular figure in the shape of the sun; and the width of the figure is 12 feet.

The stone is composed of volcanic rock, and weighs 20 tons as it exists today. The rock appears to have been obtained from a quarry several miles from Mexico City; and it is estimated that before the carving was done, the rough block weighed from 40 to 50 tons.

It may be that the block was cut down before it was moved from the quarry; but, in any case, it was too heavy for people to lift. There were no oxen or other large beasts of burden in Mexico before the white men came, so it must have been moved with the help of rollers.

At the center of the Calendar stone is a picture or symbol of the sun god and with the rest of the carving, it tells the Aztec story of "the world's history."

The Aztecs declared that four suns had existed before the one they saw in the sky. The first sun was supposed to have been destroyed by a jaguar, the second by a whirlwind, the third by a rain of fire, and the fourth by a flood. It was believed that the fifth sun would be destroyed by an earthquake.

Lesson for March 1

VISION AND SERVICE

LESSON TEXT—Luke 9:28-43a.

GOLDEN TEXT—He that abideth in me, and I in him, the same beareth much fruit.—John 15:5b.

PRIMARY TOPIC—On a Mountain Top With Jesus.

JUNIOR TOPIC—On a Mountain Top With Jesus.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—With Jesus in Prayer and Service.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Worship and Work.

The subject of this lesson as chosen by the lesson committee needs to be most rigidly held to its place as set forth in the Scriptures. The lesson should not be taught in a general way as pertaining to vision and service. The particular vision herein set forth is the unveiling of the majestic person of the Son of God, with an epitome of the messianic kingdom.

Jesus took with him Peter, James, and John, and went into the mount to pray. His chief aim in retirement was to get the disciples into a state of receptivity so that he might show them the reality and method of his kingdom. Before going into the mount, he declared that there were some standing in his presence who would not taste death until they should see the Son of man coming in his kingdom (Luke 9:27; cf. Matt. 16:28). That their drooping spirits might be revived and their confidence restored, he was transfigured before them. Two men from the upper world were sent to converse with him about his approaching death in Jerusalem (v. 31)—the very thing about which the disciples refused to talk. Then, too, God's own voice was heard in words of approval of Christ's course, directing them to hear the Master. Surely now they cannot doubt his ability to carry to execution his kingdom plans. The purpose, then, of the transfiguration was to give the disciples a foregleam of the coming kingdom, to enable them to see the kingdom in its embryonic form. That this is true is not only shown by the context and circumstances, but by the inspired interpretation of one who was with him and knew all that transpired (see II Pet. 1:16-19, R. V.). Let us, therefore, note the outstanding features of the kingdom as displayed in the transfiguration.

1. Jesus Christ the Glorified King on Mount Zion (vv. 28, 29).

Jesus glorified on the mount to which they went to pray was intended to symbolize the messianic kingdom as it will be when Christ returns literally to the Mount of Olives in Jerusalem (Zech. 14:4-17).

2. The Glorified Saints With Christ (vv. 30, 31).

1. Moses, who was once denied entrance into Palestine, appears now in glory, representing the Redeemed of the Lord who after death shall pass into the kingdom. Many thousands of the redeemed have fallen asleep, and at the coming of the Lord shall be awakened to appear in the kingdom with him.

2. Elijah, now glorified, represents the redeemed who shall pass into the kingdom through translation. Many shall be living upon the earth when the Lord comes, and shall, without dying, be changed, and thus pass into the kingdom (I Cor. 15:50-53; I Thess. 4:14-18).

3. The topic of conversation (v. 31). It was the death of Christ, the very thing the disciples refused to believe.

III. Israel in the Flesh in Connection With the Kingdom, Represented by Peter, James, and John (v. 28).

Israel shall be called from their hiding place among the nations of the earth and shall be gathered to Jesus Christ, the King, as the central people in the kingdom (Ezek. 37:21-27). Christ is the King of the Jews.

1. Peter's proposal to build three tabernacles (v. 33). The Feast of the Tabernacles looked forward to the glorious reign of Christ. Peter caught a glimpse of the significance of the transfiguration. His proposition showed that he apprehended the meaning of the Feast of the Tabernacles and, therefore, his proposition substantially was, "The millennium is come; let us celebrate."

2. The divine voice (v. 35). At this time God himself uttered words which assured them that the transfigured one was his Son, Jesus Christ.

IV. The Multitude at the Foot of the Mount (vv. 37-43).

The people here were grievously oppressed by the devil, as illustrated by the demon-possessed lad. There are times when the devil is especially active in the affairs of men. The multitude at the foot of the mount is representative of the nations which shall be brought into the kingdom which shall be established over Israel (Isa. 11:10-12).

STAR DUST

Movie • Radio

By VIRGINIA VALE

GINGER ROGERS is a girl to be pitied, though you may not think so when you consider those gay, glamorous pictures that she makes with the nimble-footed Fred Astaire. But it's because of those same pictures that Ginger has a grievance.

For it's as a result of all that dancing that Ginger's feet hurt. She has to practice the various new routines for days at a stretch, and then do them over and over again for the picture.

You'd think that would make her feel that, when her work was done, she'd had enough dancing. But not at all—when she arrived in New York recently for a vacation she announced that she was going to see a lot of new plays—and do a lot of dancing! As for her partner, Fred Astaire, he's so happy these days because of the arrival of his brand new son that he doesn't know whether he's on his head or his heels.

Kay Francis has a lot of fun when she deserts Hollywood; she is one of the few actresses who doesn't look actressy when she's not working; as a result of that fact, few people recognize her and she can go to theaters and night clubs without being mobbed by admirers. She doesn't depend on dark glasses, either.

Here's good news for all of us. Ed Wynn and Jack Pearl are to be heard on the air waves again, and it's quite likely that B. A. Rolfe will also return on a Saturday evening program—and as a result of the many letters that have poured in asking for him. So, you see, the letters that you write your radio favorites really do have some effect.

If you have sat and suffered through some of the shorts that supplemented feature pictures, and decided that you could think up better ones yourself, here's your chance. Centaur Films, a new organization, would like to have the public submit ideas for short subjects—and they'll give away an automobile each day for the best idea presented!

Errol Flynn, who became famous overnight as a result of his looks and his acting in "Captain Blood," is one of the few movie stars who have really written a book—written it all himself, I mean. A good publisher has accepted it. Which reminds everybody of all those announcements of the novel that Jean Harlow was said to be writing, ever so long ago, and of the reports that it never came to anything because she had a quarrel with the person who really was writing it for her. Elissa Landi has written several novels that have been published, of course; they're good enough so that she can abandon the screen for the typewriter any time she wants to. She returned to the stage briefly not long ago, but the play was not a success, and now she's going to make some more pictures in England.

Mary Pickford just can't stop working. As if producing pictures weren't enough, she's going to broadcast again—this time from the projection room of her home, Pickfair.

Isabell Jewell is finally getting the breaks that she has wanted. She did very well, indeed, in "A Tale of Two Cities." Then she turned in an excellent performance in "Ceiling Zero." So she was given a test for the role of "Lotus" in "The Good Earth," for which practically everybody, including Anna May Wong, has been tested, and so far hers is the best. They're going to get at the making of this picture at last, and a good thing it is, too—the planning and discussing of it have been going on everlastingly, it seems.

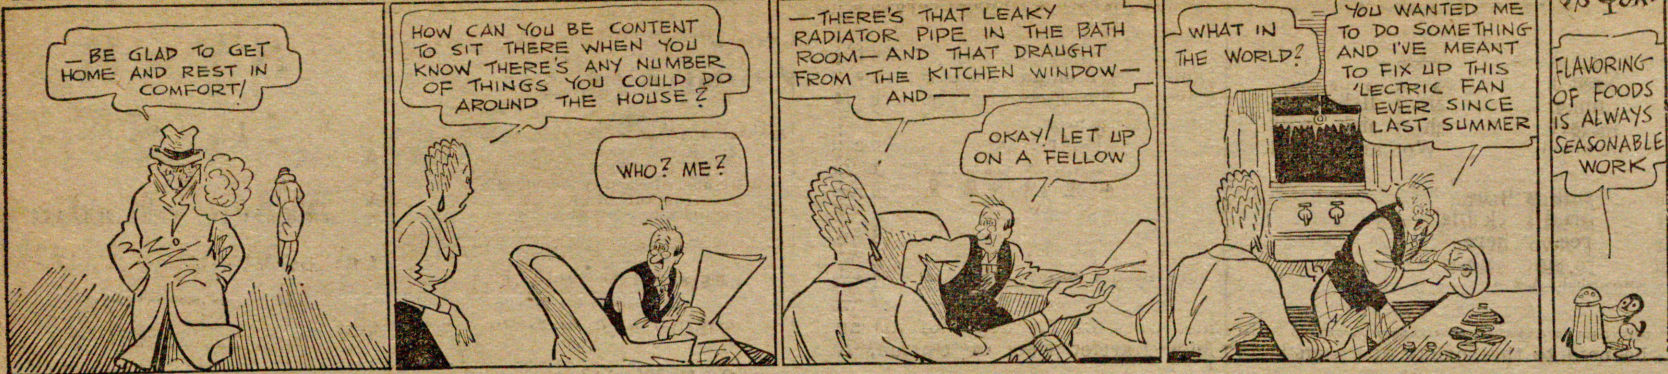

Popular football players used to sell bonds after they were graduated from college. Now they go into the movies, if they can. Nick Lukats, a Notre Dame star, is the latest recruit.

ODDS AND ENDS . . . That weekly program of Bing Crosby's has become one of the most popular on the air . . . Add "The Ghost Goes West" to the pictures you really must see . . . Margaret Sullivan, who is too, too temperamental, was actually ordered to throw things in a scene for "The Moon's Our Home" . . . Douglas Fairbanks has sold "The Mark of Zorro" to Twentieth Century-Fox, and reluctantly, because he wanted to make it again himself . . . With songs added, it will probably be used for Lawrence Tibbett . . . Myrna Loy may be teamed with Robert Montgomery . . . John Barrymore almost lost his job in "Romeo and Juliet"; however, told that he'd have to do better work, he improved so fast that he's turning in one of his best performances.

Customer—Look here, friend, can't you send somebody over to this table who has been a baseball pitcher? Head Waiter—A pitcher, sir? Customer—Yes. We have been here for three-quarters of an hour waiting for somebody to put something across this table.

PLAYING SAFE

Mrs. Love—Why don't you take out a life insurance policy payable to me? Hubby—You're too lucky—that's why.

ENUMERATION

Mr. Holdout—How can you accuse me of robbing the children's bank when you have only the word of those infants that their change is short? Wife—They are the little things that count.

INFLATION

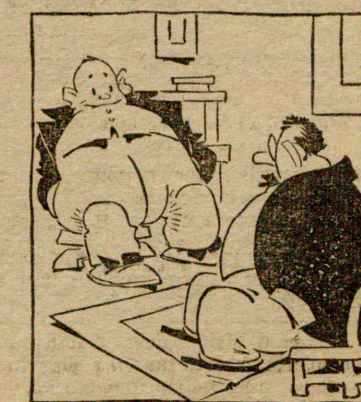

"I asked father to let me go abroad and develop my voice." "What did he say?" "He said it was over-developed now."

IF YOUR HONOR PLEASE

Caller—This poem was written by a lawyer. Has it any value? Editor (glancing through it)—About as much value as a legal opinion written by a poet.

BAG AND BAGGAGE

"Why are you so happy?" "My wife left me." "Where did she go?" "Back to her mother."

All Around the House

Two tablespoons of grape juice added to a grapefruit after it has been cut gives a delicious flavor and a pretty color.

To remove a stopper from a glass jar, pour warm water into a pan and invert jar in it, gradually add warmer water until it is quite hot, but not so hot as to break jar. Leave in water for some time, occasionally trying stopper to see if it is loose.

Two coats of thin shellac give a hardwood floor a much better finish than one thick one. First coat must be thoroughly dried before second is applied.

Sponge cake cut in squares and served with any preserved or fresh fruit with a topping of whipped cream makes a delicious, quick dessert.

A teaspoon of strained honey added to whipped cream sweetens it and gives it a delicious flavor. It stays firm longer than it does when sugar is used for sweetening.

Do You Ever Wonder

Whether the "Pain" Remedy You Use is SAFE?

Ask Your Doctor and Find Out

Don't Entrust Your Own or Your Family's Well-Being to Unknown Preparations

THE person to ask whether the preparation you or your family are taking for the relief of headaches is SAFE to use regularly is your family doctor. Ask him particularly about Genuine BAYER ASPIRIN.

He will tell you that before the discovery of Bayer Aspirin most "pain" remedies were advised against by physicians as bad for the stomach and, often, for the heart. Which is food for thought if you seek quick, safe relief.

Scientists rate Bayer Aspirin among the fastest methods yet discovered for the relief of headaches and the pains of rheumatism, neuritis and neuralgia. And the experience of millions of users has proved it safe for the average person to use regularly. In your own interest remember this.

You can get Genuine Bayer Aspirin at any drug store—simply by asking for it by its full name, BAYER ASPIRIN. Make it a point to do this—and see that you get what you want.

FRANKFORT

Stanley Warning The pupils of room 3 will give a play entitled: "The Ghost Chaser", in the month of March. The intermediate and primary rooms will give their night of entertainment and room 3 will then render a few selections also. Watch for further announcements.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Bobzin and the former's mother, Mrs. John Bobzin of Oak Park, visited Sunday in the Baumann home.

The Royal Neighbors will meet Thursday evening March 5 in the Frankfort hall.

A daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. Emil Tewes February 19 in Silver Cross hospital in Joliet.

Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Lankenau and son who have been here for several days, will leave Monday for their home in Dearborn, Michigan where Mr. Lankenau is employed.

A daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Townsend of New Lenox, in Silver Cross hospital, Saturday February 22. The name of Donna Mae has been given to the young lady. Her mother is the former Miss Anna Lorenzen of Frankfort. Sixteen tables of pinocle and two of bunco were in play at the card party given by the Royal Neighbors last week. Prizes were awarded. A door prize, a cake which was donated by the Tinley Park Bakery, was awarded to Mr. Geo. Schroeder.

Relatives honored the 70th birthdays of Mr. Fred and Henry Harnack, twin brothers, in the former's home Sunday.

ORLAND

The dance sponsored by the Parish Social club at the Goodings Grove dance hall Saturday night was very well attended. All present report a fine time.

The Orland Park Legion Post are making preparations for a prize masquerade which they will sponsor at the Goodings Grove dance hall on St. Patrick's day, March 17.

A number of Orland Park Masons attended the funeral of Wm. Meyer organist for the Calumet Masonic Lodge, Tuesday. Mr. Meyer died very suddenly in his home in Blue Island Sunday morning.

Politics are beginning to claim the lime light. Altho no local elections, either village or township will be held this year, yet keen interest is beginning to be shown in county, state and national politics.

Two Republican candidates have announced themselves for the office of precinct committeeman in the first precinct in Orland township. They are I. A. Cleveland and Fred E. Yunker. They will be voted on at the primary April 14.

The auction sale held Tuesday on the Tom Welter farm drew a very large crowd. Bidding was quite spirited and good prices were realized. Schmaedeke and Erickson of Orland township were the auctioneers.

The heavy thaw of the last few days resulted in flooded basements in many parts of Orland Park.

The village board is considering the purchase of a new pump for the village water plant.

The Orland Park R. N. A. held their monthly meeting in the Creer hall Thursday.

The village board has rented the Felten house for use as headquarters for the WPA workers now engaged in road work in Orland Park.

Thawing of heavy snow and ice along 143rd street east of Orland caused the highway to be flooded. Tuesday afternoon the water on the highway was up to the running boards of automobiles.

Barney Moore is planning to hold a pinocle party the second Thursday night in March.

Wm. Junker who has been ill with an attack of pneumonia, is much improved.

A PATRIOTIC IDEAL

The motivating purpose of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States is service — service to our government and to its people as a whole. We are not pious sentimentalists in thus describing that purpose. The government of the United States is the people of the United States. The welfare of the government is the welfare of the people. In their aim and determination to serve the best interests of this nation, the members of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States are fully aware that they will thus serve their own best interests and the best interests of their wives, their children, their neighbors and their fellow citizens.

The membership of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States is composed exclusively of veterans who have served under the American flag in wars, insurrections and expeditions on foreign soil or in hostile waters. They include veterans of the war with Spain, the Chinese Boxer Rebellion, the Philippine Insurrection, the World War and the Nicaraguan campaigns. But not one of these men who bore arms in this nation's service in the emergency of war, believes his patriotic duty to his country was completely fulfilled by that war-time service. He conceives his patriotic duty to be of the present and the future, as well as the past. He is not resting on his laurels. Aroused to present-day national problems and dangers, he and his comrades are constantly on the alert to serve the United States of America in peace as they served it in war.

A large part of the peace-time patriotic service of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States is accomplished through its nationwide Americanism program, pursued by more than 3,300 local units under the supervision of the national Department of Americanism at Washington, D. C. The V. F. W. Americanism program encompasses a wide range of activities. It includes the building of sound American citizenship; the fostering of patriotism, faith and confidence in America and American institutions; the preservation of American freedom and the protection of all things American from those subversive and anti-American forces which today are seeking to tear down the Constitution and destroy the American form of government. In brief, the Americanism ideals of the V. F. W. can be summed up in those famous words—"One country, one language one flag."

Mr. and Mrs. Gardner and daughter of New York are visiting in the home of the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Kohlhaagen.

The Ladies Aid of the M. E. church will meet Thursday afternoon March 5, in the church parlors with Mrs. Minnie Clark and Mrs. Violet Clark as hostesses.

MARLEY

Iva Gillette

Next Friday evening, February 28, an entertainment will be held in the Marley Church which will be sponsored by the Woman's Missionary society.

A talk will be given on "The New Memorial Park Idea" illustrated with pictures. There is no admission charge and no offering will be charged. All are invited to come, but the heads of the families are especially urged as fifteen cents will be paid to the society for each head of the family present.

Musical numbers will be given. The program will begin at eight o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Hase were dinner guests Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wright Woods.

Mr. and Mrs. Amos Bruns and sons Joseph and David of New Lenox were entertained at dinner Sunday evening in the A. R. Kercheval home.

Theme for Sunday morning: The Vision Required in Building a Christian World.

For our Lenten Sunday mornings we are to give our major attention to the theme, "Building a Christian World." We shall take it as axiomatic that we need a Christian world. The recognition of that need, however, is only a beginning. A Christian world will be built only by men and women who give themselves intelligently and devotedly to the task. In order that we may better stimulate that intelligence and call forth that devotion we shall consider these next six weeks certain qualities of character required of those who would build a Christian world.

"The Vision Required" will be the first topic to engage our attention. A Christian builder must first of all have an insight into those values that are worthy the name Christian. A sensitiveness to both moral evil and the Christian ideal is vital. How does one develop such sensitiveness? What is included in the vision of a Christian world? Are we worthy to stand in the noble succession of those before us who saw and lived by the vision splendid? These are some of the questions we shall consider next Sunday. You are invited to worship with us.

A meeting of the church cabinet is called for next Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Please make your plans to attend. This is an advisory rather than an official group, and the minister feels he needs the counsel of a considerable number of people as he plans the future program of the church.

The young people of the church, and their friends, are invited to share a pleasant evening at the Arthur Devol home next Sunday. Plan to come at seven o'clock.
